

FEB 26 1965

New Magazine, Dialogo

New York's first monthly pocket magazine for Spanish-speaking Protestants will come off the presses a little before Easter.

It will be called Dialogo and will be edited by the Rev. Cecilio Arrastia, a Cuban exile and former president of the Cuban Council of Churches.

He will be assisted by the Rev. Diego Rico-Soltero, program counselor for Spanish Presbyterian churches in New York. The two editors are Presbyterians, but will accept contributions without regard to creed.

Within the last 10 years, Mr. Rico-Soltero said yesterday, Spanish-speaking Presbyterian congregations have increased from two to 18, with five more being formed.

*